

Paul Philp received both a Bachelor of Science in Foreign Service and a Certificate of German Public and International Studies from Georgetown University in Washington, DC. He earned his State of Texas certificate in secondary education in composite social studies from the University of Texas at Dallas. Both his Master of Art's degree in Modern History and State of Texas endorsement in gifted and talented education are from Texas A&M University – Commerce.

After thirteen years as a classroom teacher and Academic Decathlon coach, Paul Philp became an administrator of curriculum and special educational programs in both public and private schools for ten years. While no longer an administrator, he teaches a full load of AP and Regular World History classes. He is a presenter for the College Board, has written multiple choice questions for the Advanced Placement World History exam, has been a national grader of the Advanced Placement World History essays for six years, and taught history at the local community college for nine years. In his spare time he is an assistant debate coach.

Publications include the study guide for Peter Stearn's Advanced Placement textbook, 3rd edition, World Civilizations, a collaborative study of the Industrial Revolution in an international, world historical context with the Woodrow Wilson Institute at Princeton, New Jersey, and Document Based Questions in both European and World History. Paul is a past associate editor for the Encyclopedia of World History published by Berkshire Publishers of Boston and was chairman of a committee that created teaching materials for the STAAR world history EXIT exam for the State of Texas.

He is currently attempting to write a science fiction novel involving alternate history while telling his two large Maine Coon cats to get off the desk.
